Shorter than Danny DeVito is the definitive Bankrupt album. With its 11 songs just under 22 minutes, the Budapest-based punk rock three-piece's wide range of influences is displayed by the primal garage beats of "Come Around", the catchy power pop of "18 Now", the So-Cal style punk rock of "Record Store Renegade", and the Ramones-tribute song "Farewell to the Cretins".

The lyrics are personal glimpses of an agonizing punk scene and a self-destructing planet through the eyes of a punk rocker who's passed the milestone age of 30. No fake emo bullshit here, this is all real.

Listening to Shorter than Danny DeVito, you don't have to wade through a sea of fillers to get the juicy bits. It's made up of juicy bits only.

- Hungary's finest melodic punk rockers finally coming into their own with their 3rd album
- Bankrupt celebrate their 10th anniversary with the new record
- New album introduced at festival gigs all over Germany, Austria and the Czech Rep.
- More frequent gigging expected, Bankrupt will be playing a club near you soon...
